About RAFMAF

Founded in July 2002, the Royal Air Force Museum American Foundation is based upon the celebration of the shared values held by the fighting airmen and airwomen of the RAF and the USAF and the Guardians of the USSF. Its mission is to ensure that this shared aerospace heritage is kept alive and to provide funds, and other efforts, to support the RAF Museum's educational initiatives to encourage future generations' understanding of aerospace technological disciplines. The programs include drone skills, coding, rotary and rocket propulsion, and materials science, providing opportunities for young people to develop STEM, digital, and work-related skills through coaching and mentoring.

About AFMF

The Air Force Museum Foundation is an independent 501(c)(3) nonprofit. Since 1960, it has worked to support the National Museum of the U.S. Air Force financially for expansions, special exhibits, restorations, enhancements, educational programs and acquisitions. The Foundation also provides necessary resources for volunteer support, special events and funds for marketing this world-class museum throughout the region and beyond. Awe-inspiring aircraft, moving stories of heroic airmen and an unparalleled collection reflecting USAF/industry aerospace achievements create education programs that inspire young minds.
